Happiness.

LECTURE BY THE REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

From the Boston Advertiser, Dec. 23d.

Music Hall was much too small last evening to accommodate the immense audience that sought to gain admission to the lecture by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the last one in the Old Bay State course; and if ever Mr. Beecher had reason to be proud of his popularity in Boston, it was in meeting that great audience assembled to greet him on his first appearance here this winter.

Mr. Beecher's lecture was on Happiness, a favorite and fertile subject, which he treated in his happiest style, speaking for an hour and a quarter. He said: What an organ is in a vast cathedral, under the hand of an ignorant player, that is the soul of a man in life—an instrument of of wonderful compass and sweetness, badly played, and therefore uttering more noise than music. And yet a wise vision may see plainly that the instrument was not made to be harsh or discordant. Man was royalty built for enjoyment. There is a joy hidden in every faculty. It is the law of its normal activity and a sign of health. Nature is not obstreperous, and does not deal in intensities, but the goal of every one of her paths has a peaceful joy in it. Every one of her real flowers has at the bottom honey cells, which coarse men do not often find out, and finer insects do. The resources of men for happiness are very great. The actual product is also very great, but it bears no proportion in quantity or in quality to the provision made for it. I say that there is a great deal of it, but there are a great many people on this globe, and if each man and woman and child but sigh once in a day, the sum of all their sighs would blow like a tradewind; and if each one but smile, the sum of all their smiling faces will be like the coming of spring. If they laugh the whole globe would sound. There is a great deal of happiness in every individual life, provided we are not too nice in applying the term. Not very much ecstacy, not very much long-continued happiness, not a very great variety of happiness, and yet there is a great deal of happiness scored up and down in half hours, in flashing moments, but the art of continuous happiness has not been found, or it has been stumbled upon by very few. I think that all healthy babies have a good time, however their mothers may fare. Childhood is apt to have a good deal of happiness—pity they don't know it. This is not true where disease is inherited, where poverty early drives children to exacting work, or where vice and squalor subject them to perversion and disease. But this condition on the globe, all over, are exceptional. The great majority of children in all nations have no small amount of happiness, which, to be sure, may be of a low grade, but yet far more enjoyable than that higher up on the scale, which is called refined happiness, and mostly is refined away. All young animals have their elation at the beginning. Men in after life look back to boyhood and exaggerate its joys. If men could have their childhood after they have had their experience, how happy they could be. No care quarrels with a child's joy. Where he lays down his cheek at night he sleeps it is in the morning. Think of this to great crowd of insomniets.

Men interpret by their reason, children by their imagination. The predominance of imagination in childhood is one secret of its felicity. In looking back to childhood some are struck with the change in faith more than anything else. Childhood believes, but man doubts. Men mourn as they grow older that they believe so much less than they did in their childhood. I do not say that life is without joy. I do not say that it is a sham. Life is a very good thing to have. Yet the art of happiness has been imperfectly learned thus far. It has been studied but little as a science. It has been put to school mostly to the moralists, to the proverbs and to the maxims of the neighborhood. The best people the happiest?—not in my observation. There is no good rule or wise maxim that is not broken down every day. It is true that goodness tends to happiness, but all good men are not happy. Happiness is the result of temperament, harmonious organization, of fortunate relations of place, thought, faculties, disposition, the circumstances of things, and lastly upon those eddies or currents which are produced by the combined movement of men in society which some men call luck, which the common people call fortune, and Christians providence. Yet happiness is a mere venture. Men do not know their organization, nor the laws of the world in which it must act, nor the relations of society. There is no chart which will lead surely in the channel of happiness. Can any one point to any rules, I will not say infallible, but intelligible? There are some hints, and some ways are better than others, but yet it is a lottery. Occupation is one element, and that only under some circumstances, for leisure and rest are also productive of happiness. If you are working, then your notion of happiness is at rest, and if you are at rest then your notion of happiness is work, and both are right. An alternation of both is essential. Good health is necessary to happiness, but it does not produce it always. Some invalids are happier than those who tend them. [Laughter.] I have seen most robust grumblers. Then comes the hygienist, who says the world moves by law. You would think all the natural laws could be counted on your fingers, but the truth is the natural laws are innumerable. A great hulking boy goes smashing through all kinds of experiences, and woe to your moral laws. These laws are relative. There is unquestionably at the bottom natural law, but how shall a man manage his natural laws? If men would only transform themselves into angels they would be happier, but how to do it, that is the question. Mr. Beecher satirized the hygienic professor sharply. Let no man be deemed a blunderer if he do not conform to these laws, he said. I myself have no scheme of happiness. Every man must find the way for himself. The problem of living is extremely complex, and happiness is the harmony of all our forces. All happiness is the normal product of man's nervous forces; but men seldom think of happiness as the normal product of something inside of them. Men think that it is outside of them, and go out to seek it as they seek goods. Happiness is the vibration of a nerve. You will have no more happiness than you have power to germinate within. A mere organization of itself cannot generate happiness, but under every condition and in the most favorable circumstances every man must have a source of joy within. Happiness is also limited by the capacity of each man to generate within himself nervous power. What education can do for a man depends upon what organization has done for him. Man cannot enjoy himself for a continuous time. We have heard so much of the expansion of our powers that we have gained an exaggerated idea of our capacity for enjoyment. My observation has convinced me that a very few men are capable of high religious happiness, while a very great majority are capable of only a low idea of moral responsibility. One-half of what is deemed religious feeling is social excitement, one-twentieth, perhaps is spiritual, and a very good deal is trying to feel as we think we ought to feel. I have seen persons who seemed to be trying to extract all the bitterness from life; others appear to extract all possible sweetness. This capacity for happiness may be cultivated. Still there is based upon organization a responsibility for disposition. A third law is that happiness augments as sensibility develops, and decreases as excitability increases. The activity of lower forces of mind partake strongly of physical excitement; whereas the activity of the higher group is higher, more natural, less excitable and more enjoyable. The more excitement there is in pleasure, the more it is adulterated. The highest pleasures tranquilize, and the peace which the Master promises to give to the world is the consummation of happiness. The happiness of life will depend upon where a man places his center. If he makes his center in the basilar faculties he will reap corruption; if he makes the centre in the coronal faculties he will reap life everlasting. The great majority of our men would be satisfied if they could have warmth, joy, food, sleep and the excitement of war or intoxication. The human system cannot generate enough of happiness to fill out the whole being. All our faculties cannot operate at once. Therefore distributive and successive happiness is the order of nature, and this distribution must take place on settled principles. Every man ought to determine what part of his mind he will live by. The great majority of men live in the cellar of the soul. The peculiar folly of our age is the waste of nerve force. In all directions we see the sign of brain dissipation. The diseases of virtuous men are no longer what they used to be—blood diseases. Paralysis is beating up in every community and finding recruits. Good men are living too fast. Each man is swept on against his will into the tumult of life. The great army of insomniets is increasing, and such men have call to lunacy. There are three kinds of dissipation—white, red and black dissipation. White dissipation is the waste of nerve and excessive use of the brain,—that is pious dissipation, scholarly dissipation, business dissipation, the dissipation of the men who, with salutary shudders, thank God that they are not as other men are. Red dissipation is the dissipation of the increase of blood by luxurious food, or the waste of blood by all those passions and indulgences which come of luxurious living. Black dissipation is that of the grosser indulgences which criminal men seek. Mr. Beecher said that audiences sometimes seemed to him like Dante's Inferno as he looked in the faces before him, especially those of the women. The more intelligent men need toning down and cooling off. Wealth and refinement should not bring indolence, but they should certainly bring leisure. Mr. Beecher then went on to consider the habits of life and hospitality in fashionable society, which he satirized in the most scathing tone. Entertainments must be lowered. Men must be invited, not because they have the nature of the swine in them. There is more real enjoyment in a summer's picnic than all the winter parties ever held. Fashionable parties are a mockery and a sham, and if there is anything more ridiculous than the thing itself it is the costume of the people who attend them. Men may redeem occupations, and make them pleasant. They ought to find their happiness in their business. If it can be made at all congenial, it should not be called the task of life. Amusements are to be narrowly studied by those who would get enjoyment by them. They are indispensable, but they belong to those chiefly who are overtaxed. Every one must test them for himself. They must be deemed proper because they are innocent in themselves. If they destroy strength and vitality, if they kill your liking of daily affairs, if they make you gloomy and repining, they are not for you. Billiards were a very good amusement for the speaker, but not for scores of young men. It is difficult to estimate the value of religion in producing happiness, because religion has its hold in secret places. It is not to be found where men are debating over creeds, nor where men are haggling with their tailor over the cut of their coat; but if we include the fruits of the spirit, which are never catalogued in creeds,—love, joy, sweetness, hope, charity,—then there is no way of measuring the power of religion in the soul. That part of religion which dwells in silence and draws one away from the world gives light to the end of the world, and to the world hereafter, and then its value is inestimable. [Applause]

Mr. Beecher's lecture was one of the best he ever delivered. At its close he welcomed a large number of personal friends upon the platform.

How Presentations are Gotten Up—When Permissible.

From the Chicago Tribune.

About this season of the year, presentations take hold of the people like an epidemic, and every man expects to have his modesty shocked by admiring friends who force a gift upon him, as a token of their appreciation of his fine qualities as a man and brother, and just as soon as he gets the article, off he rushes to a newspaper office with a notice of the ceremony, begging its insertion as a matter of news and public interest, when nobody knows him, or cares whether he got a gold-headed cane, or a silver-mounted coffin, or nothing at all. He thinks that the world is waiting anxiously to know what he got, how he got it, what was said, and how he said it. That is a mistake. The world thinks nothing at all about him or his new gold watch, or whatever was presented to him. Of course he sends the notice to his family, and fills the mail-bags, for two or three days with papers on their way to all his relatives, so that they may know how popular he has become. There is a vast amount of human nature in the world, and perhaps this vanity or weakness is pardonable. Sometimes it is the maker of the usual "neat and happy speech," the inevitable "few remarks," who longs for the publication of the notice, so that he may go before an admiring public through the newspapers.

There is a good deal of tom-foolery and selfishness in these presentations, and but seldom are they an expression of good feeling on the part of all the donors toward the donee. In fact, in not a few cases they are frauds in that respect. When an employer gets a set of silver from his employees, it is simply a quiet way of flattering his vanity, and a return is expected. Some shrewd fellow starts the movement, goes around with a subscription paper among his fellow-workmen, and compels them to pay something, when, perhaps, their little children are robbed of their Christmas presents by this blackmailing system. They cannot refuse. It would be a direct insult to the person to be flattered, and a workman cannot slap his employer's face. That is the way the thing is done, the manager of the affair making the speech, getting all the favor, and his name in print besides. Such tokens of esteem are gratifying to the recipient, perhaps, but if he heard the observations of the poor fellows who have been swindled, he would have reason to change his mind. As a general rule, presentations from employees to employer or superintendent, are pure humbugs, and indicate nothing but that some smart chap has been using others for his own benefit. Instances have occurred where the gift has been paid for by the receiver, who has the receipt in his pocket when the ceremony takes place. What a valuable indication of popularity must such a present be?

All presentations are not frauds, however. When a man presents his wife with a kiss on Christmas morning, making it more than usually sweet, there is no fraud about that, no discount upon it. No speech is necessary, and he does not run at full speed to a newspaper to announce to the whole world that he kissed his wife. If he gives one of the children a particularly good licking, nothing is known of it outside. The young one has all the felicity to itself, and enjoys it all the more. When a dozen workingmen get together and buy a turkey for one of their number who has a large family, or has met with a misfortune, it is genuine friendship, and there is no speechifying, no publicity. They do not let their right hand know what the other does. When an old member of a firm, or one in authority, is retiring from a place where he has won the respect and love of all under him, and they give something expecting expecting no favors in the future, the presentation is legitimate, and reflects credit on all concerned. It is the advertising presentations,

AN AMERICAN CIRCUS IN FLORENCE.—The Florence (Italy) correspondence of the New York Times describes the sensation recently caused in that city by the passage through the streets of the elephants, camels, horses and toggery of an American circus company. The climax was capped when the master of the leather ribbons drove his twenty-six horses, hitched to his triumphal car, through the town. The streets were thronged as for a holiday, and, as the abrupt angle of some narrow, ancient passage was skillfully turned, the crowd gave their applause as heartily as if to some successful hero returning from a fight.

THE Pullman cars will soon put a girdle around the world—that portion of the globe at least traversable by iron rails. The recently completed railroad between Bombay and Calcutta, India, which is fourteen hundred miles long, is furnished with these American comforts to solace the traveler on his journey of sixty-two hours. The opening of this road has aroused great expectations of the development of India. Crowds of people are rushing to the interior from Bombay, for the purpose of cultivating this country, which it is expected will soon become the greatest cotton growing region of the world.

THE Brooklyn side caisson of the East River Bridge has been placed in position. The caisson weighs thirty thousand tons, and was sunk to the depth of forty-five feet below low water mark, making the timber platform four feet lower than the bed of the river. It is supported by seventy-four stone piers, four feet square, topped with brick work, and built within two feet of the roof of the chamber. The cavity beneath the caisson is to be filled with concrete. A wall of concrete from twelve to fourteen feet thick is first to be laid around the caisson to prevent leakage under the outer or bottom edge, and when this is dry the compressed air will be allowed to escape, and the interior and the different flues and chambers will then be filled with about seven thousand cubic yards of concrete.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.—The postmaster general has issued the following order: Ordered, That all kinds of printed matter other than newspaper, when addressed from the United States to, or received in the United States from any foreign country or place, shall hereafter be chargeable with the following rates of postage, to be collected at the office of mailing on matter sent, and at the office of delivery on matter received, viz.: For each package not exceeding one ounce in weight, two cents; exceeding one ounce in weight and under two, three cents; exceeding two and under four ounces, four cents, and four cents for every additional four ounces or fraction of four ounces. Provided always, that these rates shall not apply to matter addressed or received by other modes of conveyance by which other rates of postage are chargeable, nor to countries where different rates of postage have been or shall be established by any past or future postal arrangement. This will take effect January 1, 1871.

LUXUMBURG.—The territory of Luxumburg, which the Prussian army has been ordered to enter and occupy as "a military necessity," to prevent the supply of material and support to a portion of the French troops from or through the territory, is bounded on the north by Liege, on the east by Rhenish Prussia, on the south by the French department of the Moselle, and the southwest by Ardennes, and on the west by Namur. Its area is 5,520 square miles, its population about 200,000 souls. It was governed for generations by German princes, and then known as Lutzelburg.

In the year 1815 the Congress of Vienna voted it a member of the German confederation as a grand duchy, with the king of the Netherlands as its ruler. In 1830 it was divided between Belgium and Holland, but the latter retained very little beyond the fortress. In April, 1839, a new treaty was made in London, by which Belgium resigned a part of Limburg, to be united with a portion of the king of Holland, and which was also made a member of the German confederation. It is a very valuable territory. The great Luxemburg railway is a fine work. The industrial resources are very productive. Arlon is the capital. The inhabitants are Roman Catholic in religion. The majority of them are Walloons, the remainder mostly Germans.

The Smash Up.

From the Meadville Republican, Dec. 29.

Yesterday one of those tragic events occurred by which one person was instantly killed, two or three so badly injured that they are not likely to recover, and some fifteen others who, escaping death, will carry the recollection and marks of their narrow escape to the day of their death.

The train which left this city, going west, about 11 a. m. yesterday, had proceeded on its way to within a short distance of Sutton's Corners, when suddenly there was felt a shock, a crushing, grinding sound, a wild scream of agony, and the next moment the end car of the train, freighted with its living cargo, was rolling over and over, down the steep embankment. Instantly the train was stopped, and those who had providentially escaped rushed to the aid of the sufferers. There lay the car, a total wreck, and all around were scattered the poor unfortunates, who a moment before, had only a thought for their journey's end. Old men and young, women and children, lay scattered about in indescribable confusion. A message was sent at once to Meadville, to inform them of the disaster, when a special train, with Dr. Lashells, was immediately sent to the relief of the sufferers.

The excitement in the city was intense, as many of our citizens had friends on board, and it was painful to witness their anxiety until the return of the special train, when it was learned that none from Meadville had suffered.

The wreck was a second class car, filled mostly with emigrants who were going from their fatherland to find comfort and plenty in the West.

The farmers in the neighborhood of the disaster were indefatigable in their exertions to lend assistance to the sufferers, and gave many of them the shelter of their homes. We understand the Company has taken charge of the wounded, and will see that they are properly cared for until they are in a fit condition to proceed to their destination.

This is another of these fearful warnings which are from time to time given us of the uncertainty of human life. It is one of those accidents which are commonly set to the charge of Providence; a broken rail was the probable cause.

ADDITIONAL.

The train consisted of an engine and tender, a first and second-class car and a baggage car, the second-class car being at the end of the train. All but the second-class car passed over, when the accident took place, caused by the breaking of a rail.

The name of the man who was killed was John Hopkins, said to be a miner, from Sharon, about sixty-five years of age. The two who were severely injured are at St. Joseph's Hospital, but we could not learn their names. The following is a list of some of those who were injured, but proceeded on their way: Stewart Wright, Cincinnati; O; John Richards, Utica, N. Y.; Samuel Jenkins, Youngstown, O.; Isaac Valensick, wife and child, Indianapolis, Ind.

Jottings Here and There.

KANE CITY, PA., Dec. 22, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald:

I suppose you are aware that back over the hills from Petroleum Centre, the above named city doth exist.—Kane City, Pa., city, not exactly of "kites and crows," but, city of mud and dog fights. That it is first-class in all respects, witness our one flourishing mercantile establishment, news room, hotels, and last, but not least, our Kane City Lyceum. Ye shades of Henry Clay! Did any one ever imagine that these old woods and hills of Pennylvania, would listen to such sound reasoning, good logic and bursts of eloquence as emanate from the participators therein. Yet so it is. Of our President, Mr. Hick, it is needless to say anything. With his wampum blanket and feathered head rigging, he rivals one of the grand Sachems of Old Tam many. Ugh! he big Injun; he big brave. Our orators, although not surpassing Demosthenes and Cicero, yet are doing finely. Their language may be more forcible than grammatical, as this, for instance: "Where am she?" yet still they are doing remarkably well, especially our lawyers, whose voices (since the advent of our phrenologist, Dr. D. H. Campbell) have been heard nightly, not exactly on the housetops, but in the Kane City Debating Society. Lawyers! not ex-lawyers, hardly pro, but lawyers that might have been, provided. But "nuff ced." Fare ye well, Kane City Lyceum, ah! From you, in all probability, will come our statesmen for 1872. And oh! ye future Congressmen, use your influence to have Nicholson pavements laid from the First to the Eighth Ward, and if money is extremely flush there, in your hour of greatness don't leave Kane Run out in the cold, for there live all the pretty boys!!!

The latest arrivals are two parcels of live infantile freight, consigned to the houses of Barrett and O'Donnell. Both are doing well. Our principal operators are Birrett and Wanscharck Bros., also Arnold and Phinney, of McCray hill notoriety. The favorite pastimes in Kane City are euchre games, for one old turkey. Poor old fellow, he changes hands daily. There is to be a Sheriff's sale at this place the coming week; not of dry goods, but of dogs. Who wants to buy a "purp?" Come one, come all; "variety is the spice of life," and truly ye shall have it. Big dogs, little dogs, dogs without legs—and if ye so wish it, dogs without heads. I hear rumors of a dancing school, to be held at the new Opera House. The services of Prof. Zimmerman, of Sherry's New York Theatre, are to be engaged. But enough of "sich." Must close, before I hear you say, "One young man writee, no can stopee." CHOP CHOP ST. CLAIR.

THE NITRO-GLYCERINE EXPLOSION.—The nitro glycerine works, at the west shaft of the Hoosac tunnel, were situated in a ravine about 200 feet from the works, and were surrounded by a board fence ten feet high. The trees in the vicinity were stripped and the fence destroyed, leaving some of the standards of the fence, while one timber stuck upright in the ground remained of the magazine. A cavity of five feet in diameter, and about three feet deep, marks the spot where the explosion commenced. There were about 800 pounds of nitro-glycerine in and about the magazine at the time, of which 350 pounds was congealed and inside of the magazine, while about the same quantity had been placed there about two hours before—the result of the morning's work. The foreman in charge, John V. Belson, had left the boarding-house, about 200 feet from the magazine, ten minutes previously with a pail of hot water, intending to have a bath, as was his habit after getting through his work. He had also removed from the house, placing it in his overcoat pocket, a small vial of nitro-glycerine, a sample used for showing visitors.

A stove fed with anthracite coal is kept burning during the fall, winter and spring, to maintain an equable temperature. One theory is that he hung his coat near the stove and thereby caused the explosion, but, as he was thoroughly acquainted with the proportions as any other man in the country, it is inferred that he had forgotten the vial was in his coat, slipped on a few seconds previously. The instant before the explosion one of the hands remarked a smoke rising from the magazine. The shock was so great that the windows of the house and factory were blown out, and the boards on the front of the factory were loosened from the plates. Several cans of congealed nitro-glycerine were found unexploded. The explosion was plainly heard and felt as far south as Cheshire. The saddest thing about the taking off of Mr. Belson is the fact of his sending for his two children to come on from the West, sixteen days previous. The friend to whom his letter was addressed was absent, and their departure was, therefore, delayed.

They left Corry, Pa., last Tuesday, and were snowed in at Dunkirk, and did not arrive till Friday, two hours after their father's death. They had been in charge of a relative, their father being a widower. It was some years since he had seen them, and he counted much on their arrival, intending to make a home and to marry again the day succeeding the accident. Mr. Belson was greatly respected by those who know him. He had been engaged with Mr. Mowbray, the proprietor of the works, almost uninterruptedly for ten years, and was in every respect a competent, faithful superintendent, and one whom it will be difficult to replace. None of the hands are anxious to leave on account of the accident, and Mr. Mowbray will at once resume operations, giving his personal attention, as formerly, in the manufacture. The funeral of Belson took place at the Methodist Church in North Adams on Sunday afternoon.—Springfield Republican, Dec. 26.

Fight between a Woman and a Deer.

The Keokuk Constitution tells of a curious struggle between a woman and a deer, near Summitville, Iowa. Mr. Will Collins, who resides near that place, started up a wild buck, and, in the chase, the frightened buck leaped over the fence into Mr Collin's yard. It was immediately attacked by a bulldog and detained till the hounds came up, which also engaged in the struggle. Mrs Collins, who was the only person present at the time, took up the gun to shoot the buck, but, fearing she would kill one of the dogs, laid the weapon aside, and seizing an axe, went to the assistance of the canines. As she was aiming a blow at the enraged deer, it sprung at her, knocking her down and commenced stamping her in the breast. The dogs seized the buck and dragged it away from Mrs Collins, but not until she was severely injured from its hoofs. Nothing daunted, Mrs Collins renewed her attack upon the infuriated animal with the axe, but was again knocked down by it, and stamped more severely than before. The dogs went once more to her rescue, and succeeded in getting the animal away from her. Mrs. Collins repeated her assault upon the buck, and this time succeeded in despatching him. The lady was seriously, but not dangerously, injured.

A Herald special, dated Madrid, December 29th, says: To-day information is obtained from papers seized that the conspiracy was of an extensive character. The members were sworn to exterminate all public enemies of a Republic. It is believed that the murder of Prim was opposed by some one, and nothing was to be attempted until the arrival of Duke D'Aosta, but the advocates of immediate action prevailed, and lots were drawn for the selection of three persons to undertake the killing of Prim. It is said the Minister of War was in possession of proof identifying the assassins, but has not yet succeeded in making any arrests. It is certain the conspiracy was of a most extensive character, and the plots were well laid. To-day there were some expressions of indignation at the attempted crime, but generally a sullen indifference was evinced by the masses of the population. Great activity is evident in the War Office. The Ministry contemplate changing the programme for the route by which the newly elected King will make his entry into Madrid. This is to be done in view of the attempt on the life of Prim.

Much speculation is indulged in as to what may be the action of the approaching Congress on the Black Sea Question. It is believed that the preliminary difficulties to be encountered will be hard to overcome, as it is almost certain that the Russian representative at the beginning of proceedings, will announce formally, as the fixed policy of his government, that the abrogation of the clause in the treaty of Paris, regarding the armament of Russian vessels in the Black Sea, is already an accomplished fact, by will of the Emperor of Russia, who cannot allow such abrogation to be in open question. The action of Congress on the other hand may suppose, from Bismarck's last diplomatic note, published in the Herald, that Prussia will refuse to meet the accredited representatives of the French Government with commissioned officers who have broken their parol. Another difficulty is anticipated from the protests against the meeting on the part of Prussia and Russia unless it is held on an understanding that all matters foreign to the Paris treaty be excluded. The belief is general that the meeting will be delayed long beyond the appointed day.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.

The Chess Congress Commitee has sent to the Secretaries of all chess clubs in the country, a circular asking for aid and assistance in furthering the scheme of a grand International Chess Congress, to be held in this city during 1871.

Last evening a boiler in the iron foundry of Miller & Defere, corner of North Thirteenth and Second avenue, Williamsburg exploded. The engineer, Nicholas Stevens, and Daniel Mulholland, working in the foundry at the time, were struck by fragments of the boiler and killed. Ed. Gealon, aged twelve years, was severely injured by flying pieces of timber. Francis Lucien and Jomer are missing and several persons in the building at the time were slightly injured. The building was badly shattered and portions of the front and side walls were blown into the street. The building and adjoining cotton waste factory both caught fire and were damaged five thousand dollars. The cause of the explosion is unknown, but is attributed to lowness of water in the boiler at the time.

Commissioner Parker, of the Indian Bureau, is charged by Weath, of Philadelphia, with various misappropriations of funds in his charge. Before adjournment of the House, the Appropriation Committee appointed a sub-committee to investigate the charges in relation to corrupt practices discovered in cattle, and other developments relating to operations of the Indian ring, which promise to be interesting.

The Tribune's Atlanta, Ga, special telegraphs that returns enough are received to warrant him in saying that three Republican Congressmen are elected to the Forty-first and Forty-second Congress from the Second, Third and Fourth Districts. In each of these Districts the contest has been very close. The seat of the Democrat elected to Congress from the Fifth District will be contested by his Republican opponent, owing to the fact that his disabilities have not been removed, and fraud and intimidation practiced at the polls. In fact, it could be called an action. Colored voters have been driven from the polls on each election day in large numbers, and at least a thousand were thus prevented from voting. The Legislature just elected will be largely Democratic, but this Legislature does not, according to Republican opinion in this State, elect United States Senators, that question having already been decided by the last Legislature. The new Legislature does not meet till November next. The Republicans here are not ready to believe that Congress will refuse admission of their Senator, whose term commences on the 4th of March next. Should Congress admit the Senators elected by the last Legislature, thus ending the question, it would give the Republican party a strong foothold, at least in Georgia, on which to rally from the late defeat.

About fifteen bills of complaint have been filed with the Clerk of the United States District Court, on suits brought against former members of the firm of Morris, Ketchum & Son by various banking firms and persons for the recovery of certain sums of money, and the value of certain securities deposited with the defendants by plaintiffs previous to their failure. On account of the noted defalcation of Edgar Ketchum, one of the firm, in 1866, the aggregate amount sought to be recovered was estimated at upwards of $500,000.

Orders were issued yesterday by Superintendent James McGregor, of the Department of Buildings, for the survey of all hotels in the city preparatory to requiring them to place fire escapes upon the buildings. The Grand Central Fifth Avenue, Hoffman House, and French's Hotel, were ordered to be inspected yesterday. Notices will be served upon them to-day. For some months past, the question as to whether hotels can be required under the law to attach fire-escapes, has been in court in a recent suit brought by McGregor against Hawkins, one of the proprietors of the St Nicholas, to test the question, and owing to the law's delay no decision has yet been reached. The superintendent is to take prompt action and if necessary to let each proprietor test the law separately.

All butchers at Communipaw, Albatorie, have been discharged on account of disagreement with their employers regarding the Butchers' Union. The animals to be killed were brought from the West in droves, and under such orders it is the rule to receive a full day's wages for killing the drove, be it large or small. If one man has not enough cattle to keep the men busy for a day they will not kill and charge for time occupied, nor will they allow the contractor to secure from others sufficient animals to make a full day's work. This act of injustice to the employers is the cause of disagreement. On Wednesday outside butchers were employed, but on learning that they would not be allowed to form a Union they refused to work. The employers are determined to hold out and they have transferred their orders to Forty-second street, New York.

A terrible explosion, causing the death of three men, occurred last night in the iron foundry of Miller & Defore, Brooklyn. The water in the boiler got too low, which was the cause of the explosion. The engineer and fireman were instantly killed, and the dead body of a painter employed about the building, was picked up this forenoon in Buskwick creek, 300 feet distant.

The new Cunnard steamer Parthia, now on her first trip with a very large mail on board, is nearly fourteen days out. She was due last Tuesday, the 27th inst.

A fire occurred at Brooklyn this morning, eleven houses being destroyed, and the occupants being turned upon the street with very little clothing. The fire originated in one of a row of two story houses, and the flames spread so rapidly from one to another until eleven were demolished before the firemen could check it. Twenty-two families are rendered houseless, and a good portion of their furniture destroyed. Loss, $35,000; insured for $18,000.

Failure.

BOSTON, Dec. 30.

The Traveller, speaking of the failure of the Ames Plow Company, says: Mr. Oakes Ames has been carrying for the past two years $200,000 Union Pacific bonds, and has almost entirely sustained its credit, but the want of confidence in the management, and depression of securities in the market was too much for him.

Fires.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.

A fire which broke out at half-past one this morning in the long frame block, reaching from 553 to 557 Clark street, destroying property valued at about $35,000. On each there was an insurance of $18,000. There were some forty tenants in the building, whose losses range from $100 to $1,000.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.

Naval paymasters Washington, Morey, Lookwood and Girard, tried several weeks ago by court martial for embezzeling government funds, have not yet been sentenced, although the records of the court were long since placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy. Paymaster Melbach, whose funds are short $20,000, has not yet been tried, although the case was made up with the others. Paymaster Forbes Parker, who embezzeled $47,000, fled the country before he could be arrested. It is understood the four officers already tried will be dismissed and severely punished by imprisonment. Girard and Lockwood are confined at the navy yard, and Morey and Washington on their personal parole, they having given themselves in custody when required by the Department.

Owing to the death of Mrs. Belknap, and in order to show proper respect to her memory, there will be no public reception at the Executive Mansion on Monday, nor will the families of the members of the Cabinet keep open house that day.

It appears from returns made to the census office that the colored population in 1870 in 1,030 counties is 1,507,011. In 1860 the colored population was 1,441,402, a gain of a little over four and a half per cent., and leaving out Northern States, which are included in the total, the gain would be less than three per cent.

John H. Surrat advertised to repeat his lecture in this city to-night, but was pursuaded during the day to abandon his intention in consequence of a letter from Mayor Emery, stating that he (the Mayor) had learned from various sources that there was great opposition to him (Surrat) lecturing here, the Mayor fearing the presence of Surrat on the platform might cause trouble, and officially advised him to withdraw his appointment. It is stated that a large number of persons had determined in any event to prevent the lecture from being delivered.

The Meyers Murder Case.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 30.

Argument was resumed in the Meyers murder case at Hamilton, O., this morning. The crowd in attendance was greater than on any preceeding day and the feeling of the people appeared to be running strong against the prisoners.

C. L. Vallandigham spoke three hours for the defence, covering about the whole ground. In conclusion he spoke of the public sentiment against the prisoners, and called upon the Court not to be ruled by the peoples' frowns.

Mr. Maginnis followed for the prosecution in a two-hour's speech. He defended the citizens against the insinuations that they were disposed to intimidate the Court. He argued that a conspiracy had been formed to take Meyers' life.

After Maginnis' conclusion, 'Squire Wilkins rendered a decision, simply stating that from the testimony he would not be warranted in allowing bail to the prisoners, and accordingly Thomas McGehan, James McGehan, Daniel McGlynn, Jackson Garver and Richard Sheely were committed to jail to await a hearing before the grand jury on a charge of murder in the first degree.

When the decision was announced, there were strong demonstrations of applause among the spectators.

Letter increase over last year over 10 per cent; money orders issued, over $246,000; money paid out on orders on this office, $1,313,000, increase in money paid out over last year, over a quarter of a million.

From May 1st, 1869, to date, embracing all of Collector Pullan's administration in the Second Ohio District, collections have amounted to $7,611,000. Of this amount distillers have paid over five and a quarter millions and brewers $28,000. In the First District, from May 15, 1869, to November 30, 1870, under Col. Louis Wetzel's administration, the receipts were $4,300,000.

Litigation.

The action to-night in the United States Courts against M. Sinser, principal, Charles M. Buchanan, Levi J. Workum, sureties, of which mention was made yesterday, was for the recovery of delinquent taxes, amounting to $15,000, and not for the whole sum of the bonds of $86,000, as was generally stated.

The weather is much warmer to-day. West wind to-night and indications of rain. Temperature at 9 o'clock 43 deg.

Admitted to Bail.

MEMPHIS, Dec. 30.

Roberts, Savage and Sullivan, arrested for the murder of Ada Jones at Manas Saloon, some weeks since, were brought before Judge Flippin, and on application for bail the bond was fixed at $8,000 for the former, and $4,000 each for the others. Sullivan alone gave it.

Desperado Killed.

On the night of the 17th, James Bryan, a noted desperado, was shot and killed near Nashville, Arkansas, by James M Norwood. Bryan had been employed by Norwood and was discharged for intemperance and swore he would kill Norwood and his wife. He made several attempts to carry out the threat. That night he attempted to enter the house, with a pistol in his hand, when Norwood fired a shotgun, killing him instantly. Norwood surrendered himself and was discharged

Negro Murdered.

William Woods, a worthy, industrious negro, living near Dewitt, Arkansas, was called to his door last Thursday night while a dance was going on at his house. On opening the door he was fired upon by some assassin and was instantly killed. No clue to the murderer.

Cuban News.

HAVANA, Dec. 29.

Advices from San Diego de Cuba to the 23d instant, state that on the 18th, three hundred insurgents, including forty negroes armed with cutlasses, sacked and burned Schapo, a fishing village, distant five miles from that city, and opposite the Morro Fortress, at the mouth of the harbor. They forced the small detatchment of defenders to retreat and killed nine persons including two women. They decamped after taking everything from the vill-ge. The Morro fired at the party but ineffectually. As there were no boats to carry troops over, those which were sent overland arrived too late.

The rebel President Cespedes was in the jurisdiction of San Diego. A brig had arrived at Santa giving the report that the fillibuster steamer Hornet passed Inaugua on the 18th inst, followed three hours later by a British steamer. It is now rumored at Havana that the Hornet has entered the Bay of Nipes and is landing her expedition.

Horse-Whipping.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30.

A female fortune-teller called at the Leader office, armed with a horse whip, and demanded the retraction of an article which appeared in regard to her in yesterday morning's Leader. The local who wrote the article refused to retract, thereupon she applied the whip with considerable energy but without much effect. The local came off victorious and the woman was ejected from the office.

In the House the following Republican officers are likely to be chosen: Webb, of Bradford, Speaker; Gen. Selfridge, Chief Clerk; E. H. Lee, Assistant Clerk. IT was openly charged in Common Council last night, that a member of the School Board had violated his official trust and misappropriated school funds to his private use. SUDDEN DEATH.—An aged woman named Mrs Sheanfelder, residing on Martin near Water street, was found dead in her bed on Wednesday morning. She had retired to rest the night previous with no symptoms of sickness, but it is presumed death resulted from natural causes, as she was 76 years of age. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

EJECTED FROM A TRAIN.—Two men while attempting to take a free ride on the 8 30 train of the O. C. & A. R. WE are pleased to learn that our townsman, Mr. R C. McPherson, has a good hundred barrel well, No 4, on the Wilkins tract at Hickory. It was struck Dec 24th, and began at 60 barrels. It has improved all the time. The well was put down in 17 days, over 300 feet deep, using a 12 horse-power Farrar & Trift engine and boiler. It is claimed that the peculiar construction of these engines particularly adapts them for rapid drilling.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—About half past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, a pair of horses with bob sleigh attached, belonging to Mr. G. C. McEowen, took fright and started furiously up Monroe street from the O. C. & A. R R. passenger depot. As the animals neared Spring street, they came in contact with Brown's new omnibus, which resulted in the pole being driven through the door, and the passengers for the moment rendered slightly nervous. Damage about $20.

HOME RELIEF ENTERTAINMENTS—NOTICE TO TICKET HOLDERS.—Do not tear off your coupons containing numbers of seats. Tickets will be punched at the door, and ushers will not give any reserved seats for coupons unless tickets remain attached. This precaution is rendered necessary from the fact that fac simile coupons for other entertainments have been fraudulently used heretofore to secure reserved seats. By preserving your tickets entire, you will avoid confusion and dissatisfaction.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT AT FRANKLIN.

Fall of the Suspension Bridge—Several Lives Lost—Destruction of the Marshall House.

About half-past eleven o'clock yesterday morning, a fire broke out in the Marshall House, situated at the Franklin end of the Suspension Bridge at that point, which connects the Allegheny Valley Railroad with the town. Though the most strenuous efforts were made to save the structure it was entirely destroyed. During the burning of the hotel the flames communicated to the bridge, upon which were from twenty to thirty individuals in the act of crossing, or watching the burning building. Suddenly one of the large cables supporting the bridge parted, and in an instant the structure tipped, throwing all those upon the same into the river below, and then fell, burying them in its ruins. Although several were seen to escape it is supposed that some are still beneath the wreck, while others must have drowned, and gone down the river beneath the ice which partially filled the channel at that point. From an eye witness of the disaster, we learn that the cable which parted was upon the lower or down the river side, and its breaking was doubtless due to the heat, which is supposed to have melted the lead used to fasten the end of the cable to the stone abutment at the end, or melted the wires. Our informant says there were about twenty-four persons upon the bridge, who were first precipitated to the river by the sudden incline of the bridge, which then fell burying all beneath it.

THE VICTIMS

were Wm. F. Neill, of Franklin, who was rescued, but lived only a short time. Mr. Allen, freight agent of the A. V. R. R., is among the missing, and supposed to be killed. Mrs. McIntyre and daughter, mother and sister of the toll-gate keeper of the bridge, were fatally injured, and cannot live through the night. Though several in the confusion doubtless escaped, it is supposed that a number are still beneath the bridge, or were carried down the river. Some days will doubtless elapse before the correct number of killed and injured can be obtained. The excitement in the vicinity after the accident was intense, and crowds gathered to assist in extricating the living and dead.

THE LOSSES.

Aside from the fearful loss of life the amount of property destroyed was large The Marshall House will foot up $5,000 with no insurance, while the bridge itself cost about $50,000 and with the exception of the piers, which are still standing, will prove nearly a total loss. The old wooden bridge which formerly occupied the site of the suspension bridge, was destroyed in 1865 at the time of the great fire in Oil City, by a barge of burning oil from above floating down and firing the same.

The following dispatch was received yesterday afternoon:

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD.

FRANKLIN, Pa, Dec. 30, 1870.

The Marshall House at the end of the Allegheny River bridge was burned today. The heat melted the wires of the bridge, causing it to fall into the river and completely destroyed it. When it gave way, there were about thirty persons on it. A number have been killed and wounded, but it is impossible at present to get particulars. GEO. ALLEN.

LATER.

FRANKLIN, Dec. 30.

Between 11 and 12 o'clock this forenoon the Marshall House, of this place, took fire and was totaly consumed. Loss $5,000; no insurance.

The fire communicated to the river suspension bridge connecting the A V. R. R. with this city and burned off one of the wire ropes, which caused the bridge to fall. There were twenty or thirty persons on the bridge when it fell. One of them, Wm. F. Neill, has died from injuries received, and two ladies, mother and daughter, named McIntyre, cannot live through the night. Some five or six others were badly injured and it is feared that there are still others buried in the wreck of the bridge. Nothing but the piers are left standing. The bridge was valued at $50,000, belonging to a stock company. No insurance. H.

LATEST DISPATCH.

FRANKLIN, 10 O'CLOCK P. M, Dec. 30.

I send you the following additional particulars of the bridge accident:

Killed—Neill, of Franklin. Missing—Mr. Kilgore, of Meadville; last seen on the bridge just before it fell. Mrs. McIntyre and her daughter, Miss Sarah McIntyre, seriously injured, not expected to live; Miss Mary McIntire and George McIntire, injured; Mrs. Henriker, back broken. There are others reported missing. GEO. ALLEN.

GYMNASIUM CLUB FOR TITUSVILLE.—We understand that it is the intention of a large number of our prominent and youthful citizens to meet at Corinthian Hall early in the ensuing week, for the purpose of organizing a Titusville gymnasium club. Major Jas. H. McLaughlin, who holds the champion wrestling belt of America, together with other prominent athletes, will be present, and the affair promises to be highly entertaining as well as profitable. The necessity of establishing some place of recreation of this description, has long been felt, as our city is woefully devoid of any public place where our young men can innocently enjoy themselves, and give vent to their exuberant spirits. Many of them are consequently driven to the wine or whisky cup, as the most rational pastime, while others find company even less congenial to while away the long winter nights. This gymnasium movement will receive the support of all right-minded people, and from the familiar names connected with it, there is no question whatever that it will at once prove highly popular, and become a decided success. Dr. A T. Comer, John D. Archbold, D. H. Cady, James S Lowe, Fred. Crocker, jun, W. W. Thompson, Henry Spear, and about 40 other gentlemen will be present on the occasion.

THEATRE LAST NIGHT.—The assemblage last evening at the Opera House was not large, owing to the disagreeable weather, but those present were fully repaid for their attendance, for the play of "Nobody's Daughter" is one of the finest in Manager Sherry's repertoire of excellent dramas, and each part was most successfully sustained by the members of the troupe. To-night is the last appearance of Sherry's company, and the great sensational play of "Waiting for the Verdict" will be given. This play has not been performed in this city for years, and it requires the entire force of the company to give it the proper effect, which is not difficult to accomplish with the facilities and scenery prepared expressly for its production.

CARD.—Don't be humbuged. I will give a written guarantee for all Singer sewing machines I sell, and will furnish them $10 less than the regular price.

My guarantee, I think, will be as satisfactory to purchasers as from a party in New York. JAMES RICE.

Letter from Father Dunn—He "Recants" His Charges.

The following letter from Father Dunn in relation to the Pope's alleged Bull against Victor Emmanuel, etc., was overlooked and not read by us till yesterday.

PETROLEUM CENTRE, Dec. 17th, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald.

Accept my thanks for the correction of the forgery, and pardon the bad opinion I expressed of you in my letter when I asserted that you knew it to have been taken from Sterne's work.

Though we may differ in opinion, both religious and political, still let us be one in love of truth and respect for our neighbors' feelings Sincerely yours,

JAMES DUNN.

A NEW HOTEL ON THE EUROPEAN PLAN.—Mr. Thomas Goodwin has recently fitted up his new hotel and restaurant, No. 8 Spring street, on the European plan. There is a ladies' entrance at the side of the restaurant proper, which leads to magnificently furnished dining rooms on the second floor. These rooms are divided into three compartments, or they can all be thrown into one large room 70x18 feet, for dinner or supper parties. The rooms are laid with the best brussels carpets, furnished by Funk, Jackson & Fuller. Two exquisitely carved marble-top sideboards, also the chairs, tables, &c., were furnished by S. J. Myers, and the large French plate mirrors, as well as the painting and decoration, were furnished and executed by Talmo. The walls are hung with fine paintings and valuable engravings. The tables are immaculately clean and inviting, the silver-plated cutlery and other ware is all new, and in fact the whole air of everything connected with the establishment is that of luxurious comfort and convenience. The third floor is set apart for sleeping rooms for transient visitors, the furniture in them is of black walnut throughout, and entirely new; in fact they are the most comfortable, convenient and elegant hotel rooms at present in the city. The whole building is lighted with gas, and possesses all the comforts and conveniences of a first class hotel. Every delicacy of the season, including game, fish, &c, from the most remote markets are constantly kept on hand, while a new French range and oven, upon an improved principle, together with an excellent cook, enables dishes to be served up in a style not surpassed by Delmonico, or the most famous caterers of the day.

LITERARY INTELLIGENCE.—We understand that Ingham & Bragg, the enterprising book publishers and booksellers of Cleveland and Meadville, are contemplating the establishment of a first-class book store in Titusville. Mr. Allen, the popular gentleman in charge of the Meadville store, will shortly visit our city with a line of superb goods, heavy works, and book of vignettes, in elegant bindings and of a standard character. Mr. Allen is a gentleman of long experience in the book trade, and has furnished the gentlemen of Meadville with their extensive libraries and choice books for many years, and, perhaps, it may be claimed for Meadville that in no city in the United States of its size can there so many and extensive and select private libraries be found.

THE LADIES' NEW YEAR SUPPER.—As previously announced, at the conclusion of the dramatic performance at the Opera House on Tuesday evening next, a collation will be served by the Ladies' Home Relief Society in the Parshall House. The price of admission to the refreshment room has been fixed at fifty cents, which will entitle the holder to supper without additional charge. Tickets will be on sale at Booth & Sargent's at 1 p. m. to-day, and at the Opera House ticket office on Tuesday evening. To avoid confusion and inconvenience, all who desire to attend the banquet are requested to purchase tickets at Booth & Sargent's before 12 m. Tuesday.

THE PETROLEUM MONTHLY MAGAZINE—The December number of this periodical, published at Oil City, made its appearance yesterday. The delay and somewhat reduced size of this number are explained by an accident befalling the manuscript after it was ready for publication, and this in the absence of the managing editor, and which could not be repaired until after his return, and then but partially.

Mr. Irvin retires from the concern with this issue. Other arrangements place it upon a firm basis, and the patrons will have hereafter no cause for complaint.

AULD ROBIN GRAY.

When the sheep are in the fauld, and the cows come hame,
When a' the weary world to quiet rest are gane;
The woes of my heart fa' in showers frae my ee,
Unken'd by my gudeman, who soundly sleeps by me.

Young Jamie lo'ed me weel, and sought me for his bride;
But saving a crown piece, he'd nething else beside.
To make the crown a pound, my Jamie gaed to sea;
And the crown and the p nnd, O they were baith for me!

Before he had been gane a twelvemon'h and a day,
My father brak his arm, our cow was stown away;
My mother she fell sick—my Jamie was at sea—
And Auld Robin Gray, oh! he came a-courting me.

My father cou'dna work—my mother cou'dna spin;
I to'il'd day and night, but their bread I cou'dna win;
Auld Robin maintain'd them baith, and, wi' tears in his ee,
Said, "Jenny, ch! for their sakes, will you marry me?"

My heart is said no, and I looked for Jamie back;
But hard blew the winds, and his ship it was a wrack;
His ship it was a wrack! why didna Jenny die?
Or, wherefore am I spar'd to cry out, Woe is me!

My father argued sair—my mother didna speak,
But she look'd in my face till my heart was like to break;
They gaed him my hand, but my heart was on the sea;
And so Auld Robin Gray, he was gudeman to me.

I hadna been his wife, a week but only four,
When mournfu' as I sat on the stane at my door,
I saw my Jamie's ghost—I cou'dna think it he;
Till he said, I'm come hame, my love, to marry thee!

O sair, sair did we greet, and mickle say of a',
Ae kiss we took, nae mair—I bad him gang awa.
I wish that I were dead, but I'm no like to dee;
For O, I am but young to cry out, Woe is me!

I gang like a ghost, and I care not much to spin,
I darena think of Jamie, for that wad be a sin.
But I will do my best a gude wife aye to be
For Auld Robin Gray, oh! he is sae kind to me.

THE CONTINUATION.

The wintry days grew long, my tears they were a' spent;
May be it was despair I fancied was content.
They said my cheek was wan, I cou'dna look to see—
For, oh! the wee bit glass, my Jamie gave it me.

My father he was sad, my mother dull and wae;
But that which gren'd me most, it was Auld Robin Gray.
Though ne'er a word he said, his cheek said mair than a',
It wasted like a burn o'er which the torrents fa'.

He gaed unto his bed—nae physic wad he take;
And oft he moan'd and said, "It's better for her sake."
At length he look'd upon me, and call'd me his "sun-clear;"
And be son'd round the neighbors, ca'd his hour drew near.

"I've wrong'd her," he sa'd, "but ken'd the truth o'er late;
It's grief for that alone that hastens new my date;
But a' is for the best, since death wil shortly free
A young and faithfu heart that was ill matched wi' me.

"I loo'd and sought to win her for many a lang day;
I had her parents' favor but stil she said me nay;
I knew na Jamie's love, and oh! it's sair to tell—
To force her to be mine, I sta'd her cow myself.

"O what cared I for Chummie! I thought of naught but thee,
I thought it was the cow stood 'twixt my love and me.
While she maintain'd ye a' was you not heard to say,
That you would never marry wi' Auld Robin Gray?

"But sickness in the house, and hunger at the door,
My heart grind me her hand, although her heart was sore
I saw her heart was sore—why did I take her hand?
That was a sinfu' deed! to blast a bonnie land.

"It was na very long ere it did come to light;
For Jamie he came back, and Jenny she took gray white.
My spouse's cheek grew white, but true she was to me!
Jenny I saw it a'—and oh, I'm glad to dee!

"Is Jamie come?" he said, and Jamie by us stood—
"Ye loo each other wee—oh, let me do some good!
I gie you a', young man—my house, a'ttle, kine,
And the dear wife I steal, that ne'er should be mine."

We kiss'd his clay cold hands—a smile came o'er his face;
"He's pardon'd," Jamie sa'd, "before the throne of grace.
Oh, Jenny! see that smile—forgiven I am sure is he,
Wha could withstand temptation when hoping to win thee?"

The days at first were dowie; but what was sad and sair,
While tears were in my ee, I kept myself in fear,
For, oh! my heart was light as any bird that flew,
And wee as a' thing was, it had a kindly hue.

But sweeter shines the sun than e'er he shown before,
For now I'm Jamie's wife, and what need I say more?
We have a wee bit barn—the auld folks by the fire—
And Jamie, oh! he loo's me up to my heart's desire.

Common Council—Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Common Council was held on Friday evening, Dec. 30th, 1870. Present, Messrs. Bloss, Cadwallader, Keown, John Lowry, Wm. Lowrie and McCrum. Absent, Mr. Bryan.

On motion, Mr. McCrum acted as clerk.

Mr. Bloss, President, stated that the object of the meeting was to hear the report of the Special Committee in regard to the opening of Perry street, between Mechanic street and Oil Creek.

Moved by Mr. Keown that the Ordinance Committee prepare an ordinance declaring Short street open from Franklin street to Monroe. Carried.

Miss Kellogg's Reappearance.

From the N. Y. Evening Mail, Oct. 5, 1870.

The reappearance of our favorite American prima donna, Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, which is announced for to-morrow evening, will be a welcome event for all of our musically inclined people. Miss Kellogg has built up her reputation so legitimately, and has so gradually acquired an increasing measure of our admiration and almost affectionate regard, that she now requires no great preliminary flourish of trumpets to ensure for her a cordial and enthusiastic greeting on her return to her old relations with the public. We expect to see the Academy filled to its utmost capacity next Saturday night by her old friends and by those to whom she is only known by reputation, and this demonstration will not be due to any managerial trickery or over-wrought laudations.

She sings just at a time when our community is filled with a fresh appreciation of the genius of a great foreign artist, but as she sang alongside of Nilsson and Patti in London, and held her own bravely, she need not shrink from the consequences of a comparison. Moreover there is no need of exalting one of these great singers at the expense of the other. Each has her own method, her own peculiarities of voice, and her own strong points of excellence. We are happy to learn that here, as in London, each has been happy to recognize the peculiar merits of the other, and that no American has welcomed Miss Nilsson with greater courtesy and cordiality than Miss Kellogg.

This is as it should be, but not as has usually happened in the history of emilient contemporary singers. The Catholic spirit of appreciation which enables New York to simultaneously welcome and liberally sustain Ristori and Annusheck, Wallack's and the Fifth Avenue, German and French Opera, La Grange and Kellogg, will be shown by the generous reception that Miss Kellogg is sure to meet at the hands of those who have cordially recognized the genius of Nillson.

COMMUNICATED.—If a woman were to change her sex, what sort of a being would she become? She would be a he-then.

Rise early if you would enrich yourself or vanquish an enemy.

The sleeping wolf gains not the prey, nor the drowsy man the victory.

Praise the friends of the day, when it is ended.

Praise a woman when you have known her; a sword when you have proved it; a maiden after she is married; the ice after you have crossed it, and the liquor after it is drank. EDDA.
